There are three versions of this text published on the website:

The first is the Paḷi Text, which shows how the text was established and the variant readings.

The second is a Text and Translation and includes doctrinal notes, but excludes the variant readings.

There is also an English-Only version of the text, with somewhat less notes.

Introduction

TEXTS AND ABBREVIATIONS

(BJT) Sinhala edition:
Comment: this was the basis of the current text, but there are many problems with the printed edition both in terms of omissions and commissions, and it doesn’t mention which books and ola-leaf manuscripts were consulted in the preparation of the work. The text is printed in full apart from the sections on the 2nd and 3rd Noble Truths in the Ariyasaccapabbaṁ.

(ChS) Burmese edition:
Mahāsatipaṭṭhāna Suttaṁ; revised edition Igatpuri, April 1993.
Comment: there is some evidence of standardisation and what appear to be a number of additions in this edition, though the proof-reading is much better than in BJT. The text is printed in full apart from the closing section (Satipaṭṭhānabhāvanānisaṁsā), which is greatly abbreviated.

(PTS) European edition:
from Dīgha-nikāya Vol II, Pali Text Society; eds. T.W. Rhys Davids and J.E. Carpenter, Comment: this text in terms of readings is the best of the texts compared, but it has a number of inconsistencies and some poor proof-reading, and is marred, like most PTS texts, by being greatly abbreviated in places, to such an extent that it would be difficult to reconstruct the text with this alone as a guide.

(Only):
The Only Path to Nibbana, Mahā Satipaṭṭhāna Sutta, by Ven. Weragoda Sarada
Comment: the editor claims this is a re-established text, correcting the text as printed elsewhere. No sources for the readings are given, but it mainly follows PTS. The text as printed contains a number of elementary mistakes and idiosyncratic readings that do not seem to have any real authority. The text is the only one printed in full.

TRANSLATIONS CONSULTED

The Greater Discourse on the Foundations of Mindfulness, from The Long Discourses of the Buddha, a translation of the Dīgha Nikāya, by Maurice Walshe;
Comment: a popular, rather abbreviated and simplified (though not neccessarily wrong) translation with basic doctrinal notes.

The Only Path to Nibbana, Mahā Satipaṭṭhāna Sutta, by Ven. Weragoda Sarada
Comment: there are many inconsistencies in the translation, which is made into rather poor English.
Comment: idiosyncratic translation according to the teachings given in the Goenka meditation system.

The Foundations of Mindfulness, from The Middle Length Discourses of the Buddha, a translation of the Majjhima Nikāya, by Bhikkhu Ēnāmoli and Bhikkhu Bodhi.
Comment: translation of the Majjhima version of the discourse, which is easily the best translation commercially available at the present time, clear and accurate, with excellent doctrinal notes drawn mainly from the commentaries by Bhikkhu Bodhi.

Comment: translation of the Majjhima version of the sutta, and the commentarial material from the Aṭṭhakathā and Ṭīkā. A very useful work and quite reliable translation of the discourse, but the translations from the commentaries are sometimes mere paraphrases.

Dictionaries

The text of Mahāsatipaṭṭhānasutta presented here has been established through a comparison of four editions of the text, none of which are completely satisfactory. PTS, which was compared last of all, appears to give the more reliable readings, though greatly marred by excessive ellipses and inconsistency.

It may be noted here that although the early manuscripts did in fact greatly abbreviate the discourses, the ola-leaves were normally read aloud by a recitor (bhāṇaka) who would fill in the repetitions, the written text being merely an aide-de-memoir to such a person. Nowadays, however, with the texts being read aloud by people who certainly do not have them memorized, it seems more appropriate to print them in full for ease of recitation, a practice that is to be in every way encouraged, as it helps the teaching to sink into the heart.

I have taken a conservative approach in establishing the text, believing that there is unlikely to have been loss in textual matter in such an important work; but that additions are quite likely, especially when they bring the discourse into line with other readings found elsewhere in the Canon. This process of standardisation has probably been at work throughout the history of the textual transmission, but there seems to be no good reason for it to continue now. The additional readings found in the various editions are recorded in the notes.

An important exception to this is in the inclusion of two lines in the section on the First Truth in Dhammānupassanā, defining suffering to include being joined to what is not liked and being parted from what is liked, and also in the analysis that follows. If these lines are not to be included here then they do not occur in the early texts at all, and must have come in from the Suttantabhājanīyaṁ analysis of the Truths in the Abhidhamma Vibhaṅga, a situation that seems to me inherently unlikely.

The subjects given in the discourse for contemplation under the various headings vary greatly from those given in the Vibhaṅga. There we see that in the Kāyānupassanā is only Applying the Mind to Repulsiveness, and in the Dhammānupassanā there are only the Hindrances and the Factors of Awakening.

When we look at the Satipaṭṭhāna discourses, however, there are many additions to these. All the additions do in fact come from the teachings that are found elsewhere, and it is fairly straightforward to identify the source of much of the additional material.

For instance the fully expanded version of Kāyānupassanā evidently has been made by including the material found in the Mindfulness related to the Body Discourse (MN 119), which, after the setting, continues in the exact same order as we have here with 1 For the idea that the Vibhaṅga represents an early stage in the development of the Mindfulness teachings I am indebted to Bhikkhu Sujāto and his book A History of Mindfulness (Taipei, 2005). See my Introduction to the Analysis of the Ways of Attending to Mindfulness for a fuller appreciation.

Mindfulness while Breathing, The Postures, Full Awareness, Applying the Mind to Repulsiveness, Applying the Mind to the Elements and the Nine Charnel Grounds.1

I have shown elsewhere in my study of the Dhammapada how material comes into a text through association.2 There I demonstrated how some verses which are otherwise unrelated have been added to the various chapters because they are in sequences that contain keywords that are being collected through collocation or thematic considerations.

The same sort of principle is at work here. Applying the Mind to Repulsiveness appears in The Mindfulness related to the Body discourse, but there it is in a sequence with the others as listed above. It is then a simple matter to include the rest of the material in The Ways of Attending to Mindfulness Discourse.

The Contemplation of Feelings and Mind occur the same in the Samyutta discourses as they do here, but in the Contemplation of (the Nature of) Things there is again expansion of the material, with the addition of the Constituents (of Mind & Matter), the Sense-Spheres and the Four Truths.

I cannot explain the addition of the Constituents and Sense-Spheres in the same way, although with the former the formula that is used is found in many places throughout the discourses, in the Sense Spheres the exact formula is only found here, and either is original to the discourse or lost elsewhere.

But the Truths can again be accounted for by inclusion of material found elsewhere. First we should note that in the Majjhimanikāya version of the discourse, it simply states the truths, and doesn't elaborate on them at all: a monk knows as it really is “this is Suffering” ... “this is the Origination of Suffering” ... “this is the Cessation of Suffering” and ... “this is the Practice Leading to the Cessation of Suffering”.

In the Mahāsaṭipāṭhānasutta, which we are examining here, on the other hand there is considerable expansion of that basic statement, as the Truths are analysed and defined. The major part of the material comes verbatim from The Discourse giving the Analysis of the Truths (MN 141) inserted wholesale into the discourse here.

There is a difference though, as the material that forms the explanation of the Origination and Cessation is greatly expanded after their basic statements, with a further analysis. We can also find that sub-analysis in another discourse, this time coming from the Nidānasamysutta, SN 12.66, the Discourse about Determining (Sammasanasutta).

1 That discourse concludes with the absorptions, which are missing here, and shows how all these things lead up to complete Emancipation. Note that in the early parallel from the Sarvāstivāda school the Smṛtyupasthānasūtraṁ, the absorptions are indeed included, over and above the rest of the material, which further suggests that the Body Discourse is the origin of the expansion.

When we piece this information together and present it in a table the origin of the extra material, as far as we can define it, is as follows:

1 The titles given in this edition are as they appear in ChS and Only (though Only omits this particular title), which have been extracted from the end titles, which are omitted in those editions. Headings being a modern convenience unknown to the manuscript tradition, BJT omits them, but includes the end-titles. In this edition both have been included for convenience on the one hand, and authenticity on the other.

2 Kurūsu is plural and means amongst the Kurus, or amongst the Kuru people, with the implication: in the Kuru country.

3 Kammāssadammaṁ is an accusative having locative meaning here; according to the commentary the accusative is used because there was no monastery in the town, and the Gracious One stayed in the jungle nearby (though quite why that should change the case is unclear, as the locative regularly means near or nearby).
“Ekāyano⁠¹ ayaṁ, bhikkhave, maggo sattānam visuddhiyā,
“This is a one-way path, monks, for the purification of beings, sokapariddavānaṁ samatikkamāya, dukkhadomanassānaṁ⁡² atthaṅgamāya,
for the overcoming of grief and lamentation, for the extinction of pain and sorrow, ñāyassa adhigamāya, Nibbānassa sacchikiriyāya,⁢³
for attaining the right way, for the direct realisation of Nibbāna, yad-idaṁ cattāro satipaṭṭhānā.⁴
that is to say, the four ways of attending to mindfulness.

¹ Commonly translated as either the only path or as the direct path. Doctrinally the former has to be excluded as the Buddha taught many paths according to temperament; and sammāsati forms only one part of the Noble Eightfold Path; the direct path on the other hand is really an unfortunate paraphrase, as a one-way street may and may not go directly to its destination, as witness the one-way streets in our cities.

Rather the phrase means simply a one-way path, as it is translated here, which makes perfect sense doctrinally (as well as linguistically), as the characteristic of all one-way paths is that there is no turning back, and they lead one on until eventually they reach the conclusion, which, in this case, as we will see at the end, is final knowledge (aṇṇā), or the state of non-return (anāgāmitā).

² In this compound dukkha means bodily pain as opposed to mental pain, domanassa or sorrow;
but it should be clear that it also implies the ending of all suffering.

³ Sacchi- = sa (one’s own) acchi (eye); with one’s own eyes, directly experiencing or realising.

⁴ The correct parsing of satipaṭṭhāna is sati + upaṭṭhāna (cf. smṛty-upasthāna in BHS) which is recognized but rejected by the commentary, which favours the derivation from sati + paṭṭhāna.

Upaṭṭhāna is derived from the verb upaṭṭhāti (itself a variant of upatiṭṭhati), and literally means standing near, therefore attending on, serving. Also related to upaṭṭhāka, an attendant (Ānanda was the Buddha’s main upaṭṭhāka in later years). The word sati is a feminine action-noun derived from the past participle of sarati the basic meaning of which is rememders.

The translation of sati as mindfulness is something of a compromise, as sati doesn’t really mean simply mindfulness, which in normal English is synonymic with carefulness; but nor is it simple awareness or bare attention, rather the word seems to combine the two meanings and intends a careful sort of attention to whatever objects are arising in consciousness. If it wasn’t so cumberse reflective awareness might be more indicative than mindfulness.
Katame cattāro?
Which four?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu kāye kāyānupassī viharati,
Here, monks, a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body,

ātāpi sampajāno satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassaṁ.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Vedanāsu vedanānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) feelings in feelings,

ātāpi sampajāno satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassaṁ.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

---

1 Comm: Idhā ti imasmiṁ Sāsane; here means in this Sāsana; which seems to be a little narrow, as many people today appear to be practising satipaṭṭhāna without being within the Sāsana of the Buddha, even though it remains doubtful how far along the path anyone can go without having attained to right view (sammā diṭṭhi).

2 -anupassī nominative from anupassin. The suffix -in here is identical in form, but distinct from, the possessive suffix -in (seen, for instance, in ātāpi which follows on the next line, meaning having or possessing ardour), but carries the meaning of a present participle. This distinction is noticeable in the texts (for another example cf. sabbakāyapaṭisaṁvedī in the Ānāpānapabbānī below), but I have been unable to find any reference to it in the Pāḷi Grammars; however, see Whitney SG § 1230, and the follow-up references given there. Its participle-nature is clearly shown by its entering into combination with the auxiliary viharati.

The prefix anu- in these contexts means continuously, or uninterruptedly (doing the action of the verb). For mindfulness to become strong it must be maintained continuously on whatever subject has been taken up.

3 Comm: Ātāpi ti tīsu bhavesu kilese ātāpetī ti ātāpo, viriyassetaṁ nāmaṁ; ardent means having (enough) ardour to burn away the defilements in the three realms of existence, this is a name for (strong) energy.

4 Vineyya is an absolutive (comm: vineyyā ti ... vinayitvā), which is an infinite verbal form syntactically dependent on a finite verb (here viharati). An absolutive signifies that the action is completed (perfected) in the past before the time of the finite verb.

This is not, however, a periphrastic construction, as the absolutive is remote from the finite verb, which never happens in periphrasis. Similarly, vineyya is sometimes translated as though it were a present participle: removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world (or some such translation); however, as far as I have ever seen, the logic of the absolutive grammatically always implies that the action is complete before the action of the main verb, no matter what idiom we use in translation.

5 Comm: Sveva kāyo loko, pañca pi upādānakkhandhā loko; the world of his own body, the world of the five constituents that provide fuel for attachment. The same sort of interpretation is to be applied below to the world of the three feelings, the world of the mind and the world of (the nature of) things.
Citte cittānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) the mind in the mind,
ātāpī sampajāno satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādamanassām.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Dhammesu dhammānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things,
ātāpī sampajāno satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādamanassām.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Contemplation of the Body

Ānāpānapabbaṁ
The Section about In-breathing and Out-breathing

Kathaṅ-ca, bhikkhave, bhikkhu kāye kāyānupassi viharati?
And how, monks, does a monk dwell contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu araññagato vā, rukkhamūlagato vā,
Here, monks, a monk who has gone to the wilderness, or has gone to the root of a tree, suññāgāragato vā, nisīdati.
or has gone to an empty place, sits down.

Pallaṅkaṁ ābhujitvā, 2 ujuṁ kāyaṁ paṇidhāya,
After folding his legs crosswise, setting his body straight,
parimukhaṁ satiṁ upaṭṭhapetvā,
and establishing mindfulness at the front, 3
so sato va assasati, sato va passasati.
being very mindful he breathes in, mindful he breathes out.

Dīghaṁ vā assasanto “dīghaṁ assasāmī” ti pajānāti,
While breathing in long, he knows “I am breathing in long”,
dīghaṁ vā passasanto “dīghaṁ passasāmī” ti pajānāti;
or, while breathing out long, he knows “I am breathing out long”;
rassaṁ vā assasanto “rassaṁ assasāmī” ti pajānāti,
or, while breathing in short, he knows “I am breathing in short”,

1 This section title is omitted by BJT, though it includes the others (Vedanānupassanā, Cittānupassanā, Dhammānupassanā) at their proper places.

2 The absolutes here and in the next line are connected with the finite verbs assasati and passasati (as in Nāṇamoli’s translation of MN 10), and not with nisīdati in the preceding line, in which case the folding of the legs, setting the body straight, and establishment of mindfulness would all occur before he sat down!

3 Parimukhaṁ means at the front, or perhaps, around the mouth, i.e. it is a vague area, not meant to be confined to one particular spot or place, which would have been easy to designate if that is what was meant (like specifying oṭṭha, the lip). It is of course the mindfulness that is important in the practice, not the breathing as such, which only provides a basis for the mindfulness.
rassaṁ vā passasanto “rassaṁ passasāmī” ti pajānāti.
or, while breathing out short, he knows “I am breathing out short”.

Sabbakāyapaṭisaṁvedī¹ assasissāmī² ti sikkhati,
Experiencing the whole body I will breathe in, like this he trains,

sabbakāyapaṭisaṁvedī passasissāmī ti sikkhati;
experiencing the whole body I will breathe out, like this he trains;

passambhayaṁ kāyasaṅkhāraṁ assasissāmī ti sikkhati,
calming the bodily process I will breathe in, like this he trains,

passambhayaṁ kāyasaṅkhāraṁ passasissāmī ti sikkhati.
calming the bodily process I will breathe out, like this he trains.

Seyyathā pi, bhikkhave, dakkho bhamakāro vā bhamakārantevāsi vā
Just as, monks, a clever turner or turner's apprentice

dīghaṁ vā añchanto “dīghaṁ añchāmī” ti pajānāti, while making a long turn knows “I am making a long turn”,

rassaṁ vā añchanto “rassaṁ añchāmī” ti pajānāti,³ or, while making a short turn knows “I am making a short turn”,

evam-eva kho, bhikkhave, bhikkhu dīghaṁ vā assasanto “dīghaṁ assasāmī” ti pajānāti, just so, monks, a monk while breathing in long, knows “I am breathing in long”,

dīghaṁ vā passasanto “dīghaṁ passasāmī” ti pajānāti;
or, while breathing out long, he knows “I am breathing out long”;

rassaṁ vā assasanto “rassaṁ assasāmī” ti pajānāti,
or, while breathing in short, he knows “I am breathing in short”,

rassaṁ vā passasanto “rassaṁ passasāmī” ti pajānāti.
or, while breathing out short, he knows “I am breathing out short”.

¹-paṭisaṁvedī, see the note to -anupassī above for a comment on this form and meaning.
Paṭisambhidāmagga says: Kāyo ti dve kāyā - nāmakāyo ca rūpakāyo ca; body means the two bodies - the mind-body and the physical body; this would seem to mitigate against breathing meditation being taken solely as a body-based meditation.

² The instruction here changes from the present tense for breathing to the future tense. The reason for this change is that once the mind is settled on the breath he needs to deliberately cultivate mindfulness to progress further in the practice.

³ The choice of simile here is surely significant, as the turner knows not just what is happening, but how he is making it happen, so that knowledge of the intention is also included in the practice.
Sabbakāyapaṭisaṁvedī assasissāmī ti sikkhati,
Experiencing the whole body I will breathe in, like this he trains,

sabbakāyapaṭisaṁvedī passasissāmī ti sikkhati;
experiencing the whole body I will breathe out, like this he trains;

passambhayam kāyasaṅkhāraṁ assasissāmī ti sikkhati,
calming the bodily process I will breathe in, like this he trains,

passambhayam kāyasaṅkhāraṁ passasissāmī ti sikkhati.
calming the bodily process I will breathe out, like this he trains.

Iti ajjhattaṁ vā kāye kāyānupassī viharati,¹
Thus he dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body in regard to himself,

bahiddhā vā kāye kāyānupassī viharati,² or he dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body in regard to others,

ajjhatabahiddhā³ vā kāye kāyānupassī viharati, or he dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body in regard to himself and in regard to others,

¹ The context seems to indicate that contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body means contemplating the transient, ownerless nature of the body, as is signified by the references to origination and dissolution (samudaya & vaya [= anicca]) on the one hand; and the impersonal knowledge “there is a body” (atthi kāyo [= anattā]) on the other. Dukkha, the other of the three characteristics of existence (tilakkhaṇa) is implied in anicca. And similarly in regard to the other contemplations.

² That we are really talking about others' bodies, and not the internal and external parts of our own body, is confirmed by the Abhidhamma Satipaṭṭhānavibhaṅga (translated elsewhere on this website), where the grammar excludes any other interpretation.

³ See DP, ajjhattaṁ (and °bahiddhā) for these meanings. In Janavasabhasutta (DN 18,26) it says: *Idha ... bhikkhu ajjhattaṁ kāye kāyānupassī viharati atāpī sampajāno satimā vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassaṁ; ajjhattaṁ kāye kāyānupassī viharanto tattha samā samādhiyati, samā vippasidati, so tattha saṃsamā samāhito samā vippasanno bahiddhā parakāye nānaddassanaṁ abhinibbatteti; here ... a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body, ardent, with full awareness, mindfully aware, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world; while he dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body there he becomes perfectly concentrated, perfectly clear, and, being perfectly concentrated, perfectly clear, he generates knowledge and insight regarding the external bodies of others. Similarly in regard to the contemplation of vedanā, citta, and dhamma.
samudayadhammānupassī vā kāyasmiṁ viharati,
or he dwells contemplating the nature of origination in the body,

vayadhammānupassī vā kāyasmiṁ viharati,
or he dwells contemplating the nature of dissolution in the body,

samudayavayadhammānupassī vā kāyasmiṁ viharati,
or he dwells contemplating the nature of origination and dissolution in the body,

“atthi kāyo” ti vā panassa sati paccupaṭṭhitā hoti or else mindfulness that “there is a body” is established in him

yāvad-eva ṇāṇamattāya patissatimattāya,
just as far as (is necessary for) a full measure of knowledge and a full measure of mindfulness,

anissito ca viharati,
and he dwells independent, and without being attached to anything in the world.

Evam-pi kho, bhikkhave, bhikkhu kāye kāyānupassī viharati.
In this way, monks, a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body.

Ānāpānapabbo Niṭṭhitam
The Section about In-breathing and Out-breathing is Finished

1 Kāye (on the previous line) & kāyasmiṁ are alternative forms of the locative singular of kāya, the former ending being the normal one, and the latter borrowing from the pronominal declension; the same alternation occurs later with citte and cittasmiṁ.

2 Some texts (BJT) and translations (Way, VRI) divide these alternatives into 3 blocks (1: ajjhattaṁ, bahiddhā, ajjhattabahiddhā; 2: samudaya-, vaya-, samudayavaya-; 3: “atthi kāyo”), but this is not justified by the grammar, which connects all the alternatives with vā...vā...

3 The translation follows the commentary, which says: Yāvad-evā ti payojanaparicchedavatthakanam-etam. Idam vutta hoti: yā sā sati paccupaṭṭhitā hoti sā na aṁnad-atthāya. Atha kho yāvad-eva ṇāṇamattāya aparāparaṁ uttaruttari ṇāṇapamāṇatthāya ceva satipamāṇatthāya ca, satisampajaṁnaṁ vuḍḍhatthāya ti attho; just as far as, this designates, and is limited to, purpose. This is what is said: whatever mindfulness is established is not for another reason. Then the meaning of as far as (is necessary for) a measure of knowledge is so as to increase more and more, further and further, knowledge and mindfulness, for the increase of mindfulness and full awareness. For the same word in Sanskrit having this meaning see SED under mātra.

This seems to me to make much better sense than the usual translation of for just knowledge and remembrance (Way); or for mere understanding and mere awareness (VRI). See also MN 22, near the end, where saddhamatta is translated by ṇāṇamoli and Bodhi (MLDB) as sufficient faith, and pemamatta as sufficient love.

4 Comm: taṁhānissayadīṭhinissayānaṁ vasena anissito va viharati; he lives independent because he is not dependent on wrong views or craving.

5 Comm: ayaṁ me attā vā attaniyaṁ vā ti na gaṁhati; he doesn’t grasp (anything) thinking: this is my self or this belongs to my self.
Puna ca param, bhikkhave, bhikkhu gacchanto vā “gacchāmi” ti pajānāti;¹
Moreover, monks, a monk while going knows “I go”;

ṭhito vā “ṭhitomhī” ti pajānāti, nisinno vā “nisinnomhī” ti pajānāti;
or, standing he knows “I am standing”; or, sitting he knows “I am sitting”;
sayāno vā “sayānomhī” ti pajānāti;
or, while lying down he knows “I am lying down”;
yathā yathā² vā panassa kāyo paṇihito hoti, tathā tathā naṁ pajānāti.³
or, in whatever way his body is disposed, he knows it is (disposed) in that way.

* * *

¹ This is where the idea that sati is mere awareness breaks down irretrievably, because as the commentary says: tattha kāmaṁ soṇasiṅgālādayo pi gacchantā gacchāmā ti jānanti ... attasaṅnaṁ na ugghāṇeti kammaṭṭhaṁ vā satipaṭṭhanabhāvanā vā na hoti; even animals like dogs and jackals know they are going when they are going ... but they do not uproot the perception of a self and cannot be said to be attending to mindfulness or a (proper) meditation subject. We see that mindfulness as taught here is always mindfulness of the true nature of reality, which is the liberating factor.

² The reduplication of the adverb gives it a distributive sense, in whatever way.

³ The grammar of this section is rather odd and asymmetric. Gacchanto and sayāno are both present participles; ṭhito & nisinno are both past participles.

If gacchanto takes the present indicative gacchāmi, we might have expected that sayāno would take sayāmi, but it doesn’t - it takes the participle form with the auxiliary amhi (from atthi), as do the past participles.

For that matter why the past participles are used at all and not the present participles is also not clear; and why they don’t all take their respective present indicatives is hard to explain, it may be simply a matter of idiom.

₁ As noted in the Introduction it appears from the other versions of the Satipaṭṭhāna practice in the Pāḷi discourses and from comparative studies of the texts in the early traditions that this section on replulsiveness is the only original section in Kāyānupassanā, which means that the rest of the meditations described in the discourse are later additions, which gives it special relevance.

₂ It should also be noted that traditionally the subject for meditation (kammaṭṭhāna) described here (kesā, lomā, nakhā, dantā, taco, etc.) is the first subject given to a newly ordained monastic, and may be taken as an introduction to the practice of mindfulness right at the beginning of the monastic’s life.

₃ Only adds matthaluṅgaṁ, the brain, here and in the repetition below, which is an addition to the formula made in Medieval times. The list up to this point is of the items that have a preponderance of the earth-element, the ones after this point have a preponderance of the water-element.

₃ This is, of course, merely meant to be indicative of the sort of things found in the body, not a comprehensive list thereof, as can also be confirmed from the simile below where examples of grain are given, not a complete list of all known grains.

1 It appears from Wijesekera’s Syntax (§133 c.) that the -so ending in dhātuso and elsewhere is not an historical ablative case form at all, but was originally an adverb that seems later to have been adopted into the ablative declension in popular speech. It then gives the varied ideas of relation (as here) and distribution, as in bilaso 4 lines below.

1 This heading is only found in ChS (though there given as -sivathika-). The titles given below, starting with Paṭhamaṁ Sīvathikaṁ have been extracted from the end-titles in BJT.

2 A charnel ground is a place where bodies were left on the ground, sometimes elevated ground, to be devoured by animals or birds. PED suggests the word may be related to Śivālaya, but Śiva was not known by that name in Lord Buddha’s time, so the explanation is problematic.

3 More exactly, vinīlaka means blue-coloured.

4 In most countries these days there are no charnel grounds and it is not so easy to find abandoned bodies to do this practice, so monks in Buddhist countries often visit mortuaries or dissection rooms in hospitals. If actual dead bodies are not available, it is always possible to use one’s imagination. The point of the exercise is not morbidity, but insight, so a degree of spiritual maturity and stability should be established before attempting the practice, which should preferably be done under the guidance of an experienced teacher. Monks in the time of the Buddha who did this practice without guidance started killing themselves (see the opening to Pārājika III in the Vinaya Suttavibhaṅga).

5 -bhāvī here is the possessive suffix, not the participle suffix, as can be seen from its nominal nature and independence from a finite verb.

Contemplation of Feelings

Kathaņ-ca, bhikkhave, bhikkhu vedanāsu vedanānupassī viharatī?
And how, monks, does a monk dwell contemplating (the nature of) feelings in feelings?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu sukhaṁ vā vedanaṁ vediyamāno
Here, monks, a monk when experiencing a pleasant feeling

“sukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
knows “I experience a pleasant feeling”;

dukkhaṁ vā vedanaṁ vediyamāno
or, when experiencing an unpleasant feeling

“dukkhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
he knows “I experience an unpleasant feeling”;

adukkhamasukhaṁ1 vā vedanaṁ vediyamāno
or, when experiencing a neither-unpleasant-nor-pleasant feeling “adukkhamasukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti.

he knows “I experience a neither-unpleasant-nor-pleasant feeling”.2

Sāmisaṁ vā sukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyamāno3
Or, when experiencing a sensual pleasant feeling

“sāmisaṁ sukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
he knows “I experience a sensual pleasant feeling”;

1 To be parsed as a-dukkhaṁ a-sukhaṁ. Another word that is used for this is upekkhā, which is this context would mean indiﬀerent feeling.

2 These are the three basic feelings that are enumerated in the teaching, what follows is a further division of these feelings depending on whether they are connected with sense-desire or not. Pleasant feelings that are not connected with sense-desire are recommended by the Buddha for loosening attachment to those that are so connected, see Saḷāyatanavibhaṅgasuttaṁ, MN 137.

3 Comm: sāmisaṁ vā sukhan-ti ādiṣu - sāmisā sukhā nāma pañcakāmagunāmisasannissitā, cha gehasitasomanassavedanā; nirāmisā sukhā nāma cha nekkhammasitasomanassavedanā; sensual pleasant and so on - sensual pleasant is a name for the five strands of sensuality dependent on the sensual, and the six happy feelings connected with the life of the householder; spiritual pleasant is a name for the six happy feelings connected with the life of renunciation.
or, when experiencing a spiritual pleasant feeling

“nirāmisaṁ sukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
he knows “I experience a spiritual pleasant feeling”;

sāmisaṁ vā dukkhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyamāno
or, when experiencing a sensual unpleasant feeling

“sāmisaṁ dukkhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
he knows “I experience a sensual unpleasant feeling”;

or, when experiencing a spiritual unpleasant feeling

“nirāmisaṁ dukkhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyāmī” ti pajānāti;
he knows “I experience a spiritual unpleasant feeling”;

sāmisaṁ vā adukkhamasukhaṁ vedanaṁ vediyamāno
or, when experiencing a sensual neither-unpleasant-nor-pleasant feeling

Kathaṅ-ca, bhikkhave, bhikkhu citte cittānupassī viharati?
And how, monks, does a monk dwell contemplating (the nature of) the mind in the mind?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu sarāgaṁ vā cittaṁ “sarāgaṁ cittan”-ti pajānāti,\(^1\)
Here, monks, a monk when a mind has passion knows “the mind has passion”, vītarāgaṁ vā cittaṁ “vītarāgaṁ cittan”-ti pajānāti;\(^2\)

or when a mind is without passion he knows “the mind is without passion”;

or when a mind is without delusion he knows “the mind is without delusion”;

saṅkhittaṁ vā cittaṁ “saṅkhittaṁ cittan”-ti pajānāti,
or when a mind is collected he knows “the mind is collected”,

---

\(^1\) Relying on an ambiguity in the Pāḷi (which also exists in the English), at the beginning of the Dhammānupassanā the commentary will say: Bhagavatā ... cittānupassanāya viññānakhandhapariggaho ... kathetuṁ; to teach ... the contemplation of mind the Auspicious One ... took up the constituent of consciousness.

Consciousness (viññāṇa) in the constituents, however, is confined to the six spheres of consciousness. The complexes that are defined here more properly belong to the saṅkhārakkhandha (constituent of [mental] processes).

\(^2\) The commentary explains that when without passion is said it does not indicate the supermundane state (lokuttarapadaṁ), but only that the mind is in a wordly wholesome or inconsequential state (lokiyakusalābyākatāṁ) and the same interpretation is to be applied to hate and delusion below. Throughout this section the Comm is careful to note that we are not talking about supermundane states.
vikkhittaṁ¹ vā cittaṁ “vikkhittaṁ cittan”-ti pajānāti;
or when a mind is scattered he knows “the mind is scattered”;

¹ Comm: Saṅkhittan-ti thinamiddhānupatitaṁ; etañ-hi saṅkuṭitacittaṁ nāma; vikkhittan-ti uddhaccasahagataṁ, etañ-hi pasāṭacittaṁ nāma; saṅkhittan means fallen into sloth and torpor, this is therefore a name for a shrunken mind; scattered means having become agitated, this is therefore a name for the distracted mind.

² Comm: mahaggatan-ti rūpārūpāvacaraṁ; amahaggatan-ti kāmāvacaraṁ; become very great means being conversant with the form and formless fields; not become very great means being conversant (only) with the sensual field. Similarly for sa-uttarān & anuttarān below.

³ Comm: samāhitan-ti yassa appanāsamādhi upacārasamādhi vā atthi; asamāhitan-ti ubhayasamādhihivirahitam; concentrated means he who has fixed concentration or access concentration; not concentrated (indicates being) devoid of both (types of) concentration.

pañcasu nīvaraṇesu?
in the five hindrances?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu santam vā ajjhattam kāmacchandamī
Here, monks, a monk having sensual desire in himself

1 The commentary has 2 explanations for the meaning of dhamma in this section, one is that kāyānupassanā dealt with form, vedanā- and cittānupassanā dealt with the formless, and dhammānupassanā deals with a mixture of form and formless; or, secondly, a division into the constituents was intended: kāya = rūpa, vedanā, citta = viññāṇa, and here dhamma = saññā and saṅkhāra. Translations usually follow the second of these explanations, giving dhamma the meaning of mental contents or mental objects. However, as noted above, cittānupassanā really deals with mental processes (saṅkhāra), not with the sense consciousness.

As noted in the Introduction, in other versions of this teaching it appears that the original structure of this section only included the hindrances (nīvaraṇa) and the factors of awakening (bojjhaṅga), which are both lists of ethical qualities of mind. I believe dhamma in this original context probably meant ethical states, a well-attested meaning for dhamma, but one no longer useable once the additions of the constituents (khandha), sense-spheres (āyatana) and truths (sacca) have been included.

2 Santam is the present participle form of atthi, meaning having. The present indicative form atthi (have) itself occurs in the reflection on the next line.

3 Here ajjhattam takes on another nuance. The parsing of the word is as adhi-, here meaning in, within + -atta, meaning the self, to be translated when standing alone as oneself (himself, herself, itself), according to context. In the next line, when in conjunction with me it becomes myself.
“atthi me ajjhattam kāmacchando” ti pajānāti;
knows “there is sensual desire in myself”; asantaṁ vā ajjhattam kāmacchandam “natthi me ajjhattam kāmacchando” ti pajānāti.

or, not having sensual desire in himself he knows “there is no sensual desire in myself”.

yathā ca uppannassa kāmacchandassā pahānaṁ hoti taṇ-ka pajānāti;
and how there is an abandonment of sensual desire that has arisen – that also he knows;

yathā ca pahīnassa kāmacchandassā āyatiṁ anuppādo hoti taṇ-ka pajānāti.1
and how there is a non-arising of abandoned sensual desire again in the future – that also he knows.

Santaṁ vā ajjhattam byāpadam2 “atthi me ajjhattam byāpado” ti pajānāti;
Having ill-will in himself he knows “there is ill-will in myself”; asantaṁ vā ajjhattam byāpadam “natthi me ajjhattam byāpado” ti pajānāti.

or, not having ill-will in himself he knows “there is no ill-will in myself”.

Yathā ca anuppannassa byāpādassā uppādo hoti taṇ-ka pajānāti,
How there is an arising of ill-will that has not arisen – that he knows;

yathā ca uppannassa byāpādassā pahānaṁ hoti taṇ-ka pajānāti, and how there is an abandonment of ill-will that has arisen – that also he knows;

yathā ca pahīnassa byāpādassā āyatiṁ anuppādo hoti taṇ-ka pajānāti.
and how there is a non-arising of abandoned ill-will again in the future – that also he knows.

Santaṁ vā ajjhattam thīnamiddham “atthi me ajjhattam thīnamiddhan”-ti pajānāti;
Having sloth and torpor in himself he knows “there is sloth and torpor in myself”; asantaṁ vā ajjhattam thīnamiddham “natthi me ajjhattam thīnamiddhan”-ti pajānāti.

or, not having sloth and torpor in himself he knows “there is no sloth and torpor in myself”.

1 Many teachings these days seem to stop short at just knowing the state of the mind, but this in itself is not sufficient for the practice of mindfulness, which continues by elucidating the further skilful states of mind that need to be developed to be able to overcome the various sorts of defilements that can arise in the mind.

2 This word is used in both its negative and positive senses in the teachings, where byāpāda means ill-will and abyāpāda good-will.
Yathā ca anuppannassa thīnamiddhassa uppādo hoti tañ-ca pajānāti;
How there is an arising of sloth and torpor that has not arisen – that he knows;

yathā ca uppannassa thīnamiddhassa pahānāṁ hoti tañ-ca pajānāti;¹
and how there is an abandonment of sloth and torpor that has arisen – that also he knows;

yathā ca pahīnassa thīnamiddhassa āyatiṁ anuppādo hoti tañ-ca pajānāti.
and how there is a non-arising of abandoned sloth and torpor again in the future – that also he knows.

Santam vā ajjhattaṁ uddhaccakukkuccaṁ

“atthi me ajjhattaṁ uddhaccakukkuccan”-ti pajānāti;
he knows “there is agitation and worry in myself”;

asantam vā ajjhattaṁ uddhaccakukkuccaṁ

1 Vicikicchā is from the verb vicikicchati. The verb is made from the prefix vi- with the intensive verb cikicchati which is formed from √ cit, meaning, therefore, to think and think; the prefix vi- should be taken in the second sense given in PED: denoting disturbance, seperation, mixing up...: it thus means thinking again and again in a mixed up way.

¹ Upādāna has two meanings, attachment and fuel, and they are probably both implied in this context, hence the translation adopted here. Pañcakkhandha is commonly translated as the five aggregates, which had me scurrying to the dictionary when I first encountered it, as I had no idea what aggregate could mean in such a context. What it actually means, in more lucid English, is constituent, which is the translation adopted here. As what they constitute may not be altogether clear there is the explanatory addition in brackets.

yathā ca uppannassa saññojanassa pahānaṁ hoti tañ-ca pajānāti;
and how there is an abandonment of a fetter that has arisen – that also he knows;

---
¹ In the Dhamma the sense-spheres include the five physical senses as well as the mind. These are then further divided into the internal sense-spheres: eye, ear, nose, tongue, body and mind; and their external equivalents: forms, sounds, smells, tastes, tangibles and thoughts. These form the basis for sensual attachment.

² This is an important principle in the Dhamma: the fetter is not the eye, and similarly it is not the form (and not the ear or sound, nor any of the other pairs mentioned). The fetter arises dependent on them, but it is the mental defilement which is the fetter, and it is perfectly possible to have eyes and forms without the fetter (see SN 41.1).

³ Ten fetters are mentioned in the commentary (to MN 10): the passion for sense-desire (kāmarāga), revulsion (paṭigha), conceit (māna), views (diṭṭhi), doubt (vicikicchā), grasping at virtue and practice (sīlabbata-parāmaśa), passion for existence (bhavarāga), jealousy (issā), selfishness (macchariya) and ignorance (āvijjā). This is an Abhidhammic list, which differs from the fetters normally listed in the discourses (at DN 6, etc.)

1 According to the commentary here views, doubt, grasping at virtue and practice, jealousy and selfishness are thrown off at the first stage of Awakening (sotāpatti); gross sense-desire and revulsion by the second stage (sakadāgāmitā) and even subtle forms of the same by the third stage (anāgāmitā); and conceit, passion for existence and ignorance by the fourth and final stage (arahatta).

² When we look at the structure of this section we can see that it follows the same model as the Hindrances above. These two sections appear to be the earliest and most original form of the Dhammānupassanā, to which the others were later added in the centuries following the parinibbāna.

and how there is fulfilment of the development of the Investigation of the (nature) of things factor of Complete Awakening that has arisen (until) it comes to fulfilment – that also he knows.

Again here we can see a play on words, because dhamma, which is the Teaching of Lord Buddha, is also the true nature of things, and ultimately they are not different from one another, but in translation we have to choose the meaning that is most important to convey.

SN Bojjhaṅgasamyuttaṁ (46.2) asks how this factor comes to fulfilment, and answers: atthi, bhikkhave, kusalākusalā dhammā, sāvajjānavajjā dhammā, hīnapaṇītā dhammā, kaṇhasukkasappatibhāgā dhammā, tattha yonisomanasikārabahulikāro; there are, monks, things that are wholesome and unwholesome, blameworthy and blameless, despicable and excellent, things that resemble the dark and the bright, herein he should be one who makes much of wise reflection (on these things).

Moreover, monks, a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things,

Catusaccapabbaṁ
in the Four Noble Truths.

And how, monks, does a monk dwell contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things,

Catusu Ariyasaccesu?
in the Four Noble Truths?

Here, monks, a monk knows as it really is “this is Suffering”,

“this is the Origination of Suffering”,

“this is the Cessation of Suffering”,

“this is the Practice Leading to the Cessation of Suffering”.

---

1 In the Satipaṭṭhānasuttaṁ of Majjhimanikāya, this is the end of the Saccapabbaṁ, only here in the Mahā- is it elaborated on.
Dukkhasaccam

The Truth of Suffering

Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, Dukkhaṁ Ariyasaccāṁ?
Now what, monks, is the Noble Truth of Suffering?

Jāti pi dukkha
Birth is suffering

jarā pi dukkha
also old age is suffering

maraṇam-pi dukkhaṁ
also death is suffering

sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupāyāsā pi dukkha
also grief, lamentation, pain, sorrow, and despair, is suffering

appiyehi sampayogo dukkho,
also being joined to what is not liked is suffering,

piyehi vippayogo dukkho,
also being parted from what is liked is suffering,

yam-pi chānaṁ na labhātī tam-pi dukkhaṁ
also not to obtain that which one longs for is suffering

saṅkhittena pañcūpādānakkhandhā dukkha.
in brief, the five constituents (of mind and body) that provide fuel for attachment are suffering.

1 From here on the analysis of the truths corresponds closely to Ven. Sāriputta’s exposition of the same subject in Saccavibhaṅgasutta (M. 141, which has some small variations), but with the analysis of the 2nd and 3rd truths greatly expanded.

2 Dukkha is the same word that is used in the analysis of the feelings, meaning there: unpleasant (feeling). This is unfortunate as people tend to think it has the same meaning here, which is not the case. Even pleasant feeling is impermanent and therefore dukkha in this sense (though it is not dukkhavedanā, of course). A more comprehensive translation might be unsatisfactoriness (and its cognates), a word too cumbersome to use without risking sounding pedantic, but good to bear in mind as a meaning for dukkha.

3 PTS omits these two lines, saying they might be an addition from Dhammacakkappavattanasutta (the First Discourse of the Buddha), but is then also forced to omit the later text that explains these lines. However, the explanation does not occur in the first discourse, or anywhere else in the early texts except in the Satipaṭṭhāna discourses, so that it seems that if they are genuine they must belong here.

4 To reiterate, it is not that the constituents are always suffering as in the examples given above (like birth, etc.), though they are always prone to it, rather it is that being impermanent they can never provide complete satisfaction.
Katamā ca, bhikkhave, jāti?
Now what, monks, is birth?

Yā tesaṁ tesaṁ sattānaṁ tamhi tamhi sattanikāye
For the various beings in the various classes of beings

jāti, sañjāti, okkanti, abhinibbatti;
(there is) birth, being born, appearing, turning up;

khandhānam pātubhāvo, āyatanānam paṭilābho:
the manifestation of the constituents (of mind and body), the acquisition of the sense spheres:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, jāti.
this, monks, is called birth.

Katamā ca, bhikkhave, jarā?
Now what, monks, is old age?

Yā tesaṁ tesaṁ sattānaṁ tamhi tamhi sattanikāye
For the various beings in the various classes of beings jarā, jīraṇatā, khāḍiccaṁ, pāliccaṁ, valittacatā;

there is old age, agedness, broken teeth, greying hair, and wrinkled skin;

āyuno saṁhāni, indriyānaṁ paripāko:
the dwindling away of the life span, the decay of the sense faculties:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, jarā.
this, monks, is called old age.

1 Notice the distributive use of reduplication here. More literally: for this and that being in this and that class of beings. Aññataraññatarena (some sort or other), and tatratrābhinandinī (delighting in this and that), there are other examples of reduplication being used in a distributive sense below.

2 We can see here the methodology employed with definitions in the early texts, which is to define terms by synonyms, so their actual usage in the particular context can be clearly understood.

3 Here is a good example of the methodology at work: jarā in its most general sense means maturing, which can of course have a positive sense. But in this context it doesn’t mean so much maturing, as over-maturing.
Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, maraṇaṁ?
Now what, monks, is death?

Yaṁ tesaṁ tesaṁ sattānaṁ tamhā tamhā sattanikāyā

cuti, cavanatā, bheda, antaradhānaṁ, maccu, maraṇaṁ, kālakiriyā;
there is a fall, a falling away, a breaking up, a disappearance, a dying, a death, a making of time;
khandhānaṁ bhedo, kaḷebarassa nikkhepo;
the break up of the constituents (of mind and body), the throwing off of the body;

jīvitindriyassupacchedo:
the cutting off of the life faculty:

idaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, maraṇaṁ.
this, monks, is called death.

aaññataraññatarena dukkhadhammena phuṭṭhassa,
who is touched by some sort of painful thing or another,
soko, socanā, socitattaṁ, antosoko, antoparisoko:
there is grief, grieving, the state of grieving, inner grief, great inner grief:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, soko.
this, monks, is called grief.

Katamo ca, bhikkhave, paridevo?
Now what, monks, is lamentation?

Yo kho, bhikkhave, aaññataraññatarena byasanena samannāgatassa,
For he who has, monks, some sort of misfortune or other,
aaññataraññatarena dukkhadhammena phuṭṭhassa,
who is touched by some sort of painful thing or another,
ādevo, paridevo, ādevanā, paridevanā, ādevitattaṁ, paridevitattaṁ:
there are laments, great laments, lamenting, great lamenting, the state of lamenting, the state of great lamentation:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, paridevo.
this, monks, is called lamentation.

Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, dukkhami?¹
Now what, monks, is pain?

Yaṁ kho, bhikkhave, kāyikaṁ dukkhami, kāyikaṁ asātaṁ,
That, monks, which is bodily pain, bodily disagreeableness,

kāyasamphassajāṁ dukkhami, asātaṁ vedāyītaṁ:
pain born of contact with the body, disagreeable feeling:

idaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, dukkhami.
this, monks, is called pain.

Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, domanassaṁ?
Now what, monks, is sorrow?

Yaṁ kho, bhikkhave, cetasikaṁ dukkhami, cetasikaṁ asātaṁ,
That, monks, which is mental pain, mental disagreeableness,

manosamphassajāṁ dukkhami, asātaṁ vedāyītaṁ:
pain born of contact with the mind, disagreeable feeling:

idaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, domanassaṁ.
this, monks, is called sorrow.

¹ We can see in this definition how sometimes dukkha is restricted in meaning to bodily pain. Compare the definition of domanassa, sorrow, mental pain which follows where dukkha is also used in the definition, but with a broader connotation.
Katamo ca, bhikkhave, upāyāso?
Now what, monks, is despair?

Yo kho, bhikkhave, aṇñataraṇaññatarena byasanena samannāgatassa,
For he who has, monks, some sort of misfortune or other,

aṇñataraṇaññatarena dukkhadhammena phuṭṭhassa,
who is touched by some sort of painful thing or another,

āyāso, upāyāso, āyāsitattaṁ, upāyāsitattaṁ:
there is desponding, despairing, the state of despondency, the state of despair:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, upāyāso.
this, monks, is called despair.

Katamo ca, bhikkhave, appiyehi sampayogo dukkho?
And what, monks, is the suffering from being joined to what is not liked?

Idha yassa te honti aniṭṭhā akantā amanāpā
Here, for that one who has unwanted, unlovely, unpleasant

rūpā saddā gandhā rasā phoṭṭhabbā dhammā;
forms, sounds, smells, tastes, tangibles, and thoughts;

ye vā panassa te honti anatthakāmā ahitakāmā aphāsukakāmā ayogakkhemakāmā - or, for that one who has those who do not desire his welfare, benefit, comfort and security -

yā tehi saddhiṁ saṅgati samāgamo samodhānamīṁ missībhāvo:
(and then) having meetings, assembly, connection, and interaction with them:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, appiyehi sampayogo dukkho.
this, monks, is called the suffering from being joined to what is not liked.
Katamo ca, bhikkhave, piyehi vippayogo dukkho?
And what, monks, is the suffering from being parted from what is liked?

Idha yassa te honti iṭṭhā kantā manāpā
Here, for that one who has wanted, lovely, pleasant

rūpā saddā gandhā rasā phoṭṭhabbā dhammā;
forms, sounds, smells, tastes, tangibles, and thoughts;

ye vā panassa te honti atthakāmā hitakāmā phāsukakāmā yogakkhemakāmā - or, for that one who has those who do desire his welfare, benefit, comfort and security -

mātā vā pitā vā bhātā vā bhaginī vā,
mothers, or fathers, or brothers, or sisters,

mittā vā amaccā vā ūtisālohitā vā -
or friends, or companions, or blood relatives -

yā tehi saddhiṁ asaṅgati asamāgamo asamodhānaṁ amissībhāvo:
(and then) not having meetings, assembly, connection, and interaction with them:

ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, piyehi vippayogo dukkho.
this, monks, is called the suffering from being parted from what is liked.

Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, yam-picchaṁ na labhati tam-pi dukkham?
Now what, monks, is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for?

Jātidhammānaṁ, 1 bhikkhave, sattānaṁ evaṁ icchā uppajjati:
To those beings subject to birth, monks, a longing like this arises:

“Aho vata mayaṁ na jātidhammā assāma, 2 na ca vata no 3 jāti āgaccheyyā!” ti
“Oh, might we not be subject to birth, may birth not come to us!”

Na kho panetaṁ icchāya pattabbaṁ:
But that cannot be attained merely by longing for it:

idam-pi yam-picchaṁ na labhati tam-pi dukkham.
this is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for.

1 -dhamma here has the adjectival sense of being so constituted, having the nature of, liability. See PED p. 336 col 2.

2 Assāma is 1st person plural optative from atthi.

3 No here is the enclitic (mid-sentence) dative form of the pronoun āhaṁ, meaning to us.
Jarādharmānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ evaṁ icchā uppaḻjati:
To those beings subject to old age, monks, a longing like this arises:

“Aho vata mayaṁ na jarādhammā assāma, na ca vata no jarā āgaccheyyā!” ti
“Oh, might we not be subject to old age, may old age not come to us!”

Na kho panetaṁ icchāya pattabbaṁ:
But that cannot be attained merely by longing for it:

idam-pi yam-piṭṭhaṁ na labhati tam-pi dukkhaṁ.
this is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for.

Byādhidhammānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ evaṁ icchā uppaḻjati:
To those beings subject to sickness, monks, a longing like this arises:

“Aho vata mayaṁ na byādhidhammā assāma, na ca vata no byādhi āgaccheyyā!” ti
“Oh, might we not be subject to sickness, may sickness not come to us!”

Na kho panetaṁ icchāya pattabbaṁ:
But that cannot be attained merely by longing for it:

idam-pi yam-piṭṭhaṁ na labhati tam-pi dukkhaṁ.
this is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for.

Maraṇadhammānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ evaṁ icchā uppaḻjati:
To those beings subject to death, monks, a longing like this arises:

“Aho vata mayaṁ na maraṇadhammā assāma, na ca vata no maraṇaṁ āgaccheyyā!” ti
“Oh, might we not be subject to death, may death not come to us!”

Na kho panetaṁ icchāya pattabbaṁ:
But that cannot be attained merely by longing for it:

idam-pi yam-piṭṭhaṁ na labhati tam-pi dukkhaṁ.
this is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for.

1 From here onwards PTS greatly abbreviates the text, reading jarādhammānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ . . . byādhidhammānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ . . . maraṇadhammānaṁ, bhikkhave, sattānaṁ . . . before taking it up again in full.
To those beings subject to grief, lamentation, pain, sorrow, and despair,
monks, a longing like this arises:

“Ahō vata mayāṁ na sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupāyāsadhhammā assāma, “Oh, might we not be subject to grief, lamentation, pain, sorrow, and despair, na ca vata no sokaparidevadukkhadomanassupāyāsā āgaccheyyun!” ti may grief, lamentation, pain, sorrow, and despair, not come to us!”

But that cannot be attained merely by longing for it:

 científ-pi yam-piccham na labhati tam-pi dukkham.
this is the suffering from not obtaining what one longs for.

Now what, monks, in brief, are the five constituents (of mind and body) that provide fuel for attachment which are suffering?

They are as follows:

rūpūpādānakkhandho
the form constituent that is fuel for attachment

vedanūpādānakkhandho
the feelings constituent that is fuel for attachment

saññūpādānakkhandho
the perceptions constituent that is fuel for attachment

sañkhārūpādānakkhandho
the (mental) processes constituent that is fuel for attachment

viññāṇūpādānakkhandho.
the consciousness constituent that is fuel for attachment.

These, monks, are called, in brief, the five constituents (of mind and body) that provide fuel for attachment which are suffering.

This, monks, is called the Noble Truth of Suffering.
Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, Dukkhasamudayaṁ Ariyasaccaṁ?
And what, monks, is the Noble Truth of the Origination of Suffering?

Yā yaṁ taṇhā ponobhavikā,
It is that craving which leads to the continuation of existence,

nandirāgasahagatā, tatratarābhinandinī, seyyathīdaṁ:
which is connected with enjoyment and passion, greatly enjoying this and that, as follows:

kāmataṇhā
craving in regard to sense pleasures

bhavataṇhā¹
craving in regard to the continuation of existence

vibhavataṇhā.²
craving in regard to the discontinuation of existence.

¹ I translate bhava simply as existence in the context of the 3 planes of bhava (kāmabhava, sensual existence; rūpabhava, form existence; arūpabhava, formless existence).

But in this context it is the continuation of existence that is at the heart of the matter. Bhava here is divided into kammabhava, continuation of existence through (result-producing) actions; and uppattibhava the continuation of existence through rebirth.

² Comm: Kāme taṇhā kāmataṇhā, pañcakāmaguṇikarāgassetaṁ nāmaṁ. Bhave taṇhā bhavataṇhā, bhavapathanāvasena uppannassa sassatadiṭṭhisahagatassa rūpārūpabhavarāgassa ca jhānanikantiyā cetaṁ adhivacanam. Vibhave taṇhā vibhavataṇhā, uccchedadiṭṭhisahagatarāgassetaṁ adhivacanam.

Kāmataṇhā is craving in regard to sense pleasures, this is a name for passion regarding the five-fold sense-pleasures. Bhavataṇhā is craving in regard to the continuation of existence, because of having a wish for existence. This is a term associated with the arising of the eternalist view, passion for the form and formless existences, and a desire for absorption. Vibhavataṇhā is craving in regard to the discontinuation of existence, this is passion associated with the annihilationist view.
Sā kho panesā, bhikkhave, taṇhā kattha uppajjamānā uppajjati?
Now where, monks, does that craving when it is arising arise?

Kattha nivisamānā nivisati?
When settling where does it settle?

Yamā loke piyarūpaṁ sātarūpaṁ -
In the world there is that which is likeable and pleasing - etthesā taṇhā uppajjamānā uppajjati, ettha nivisamānā nivisati.

here this craving when it is arising arises, here when settling it settles.

Kiñ-ca loke piyarūpaṁ sātarūpaṁ?
And in the world what is likeable and pleasing?

1 In Saccavibhaṅgasutta (MN 141) this section, which expands on the second Noble Truth is not found. It appears to have been brought in from the the Discourse about Determining (Sammasanasutta, SN 12.66), which follows the very same scheme. The same applies to the third Noble Truth below.

2 This cognate use of the present participle and the present tense of the same verb, apart from its use in this and the following section, seems to be very rare in the discourses. The only other occurrence I have found is ummajjamānā ummajjanti (emerging they emerge) in the simile of the fisherman at the end of Brahmajālasutta (DN 1).

3 As we will see in the section on cessation, although this is the place where it arises, it isn’t the place where it necessarily arises, it can also cease in the same place, provided there is mindfulness and understanding, particularly of the danger involved in sense-desire.
In the world the eye is likeable and pleasing -

¹ The commentary says: Atha nesaṁ tattha anuppannā ceva taṇhā uppaṭtati, uppannā ca taṇhā punappunaṁ pavattivasena nivisati. Tasmā Bhagavā: “Cakkhu loke piyarūpaṁ sātarūpaṁ, etthesā taṇhā uppajjamānā uppaṭtati” ti-adimāha; craving does not arise when these have not arisen in that place, (but) because of manifesting again and again arisen craving settles. Therefore the Auspicious One said: “In the world the eye is likeable and pleasing...” and so on.

Idaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, Dukkhasamudayaṁ Ariyasaccam.
This, monks, is called the Noble Truth of the Origination of Suffering.
Nirodhasaccaṁ
The Truth of Cessation

Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, Dukkhanirodham ariyasaccaṁ?
And what, monks, is the Noble Truth of the Cessation of Suffering?

Yo tassā yeva taṇhāya asesavirāganirodho -
It is the complete fading away and cessation without remainder of that craving - cāgo paṭinissaggo mutti anālayo.

liberation, letting go, release, and non-adherence.

Sā kho panesā, bhikkhave, taṇhā kattha pahīyamānā pahīyati?
Now where, monks, is that craving when it is being abandoned (actually) abandoned?

Kattha nirujjhamānā nirujjhati?
When ceasing where does it cease?

Idam vuccati, bhikkhave, Dukkhanirodhaṁ Ariyasaṅcaṁ.
This, monks, is called the Noble Truth of the Cessation of Suffering.
Katamañ-ca, bhikkhave, Dukkhanirodhagāminī Paṭipadā Ariyasaccaṁ?
Now what, monks, is the Noble Truth of the Practice Leading to the Cessation of Suffering?

Ayam-eva ariyo¹ aṭṭhaṅgiko maggo,² seyyathīdanī:
It is this noble path with eight factors, as follows:

sammādiṭṭhi, sammāsaṅkappo,
right view, right thought,

sammāvācā, sammākammanto, sammā-ājīvo,
right speech, right action, right livelihood

sammāvāyāmo, sammāsati, sammāsamādhi.³
right endeavour, right mindfulness, right concentration.

¹ Ariya means primarily belonging to the Ariyan people; when used ethically, however, as the Buddha used it, it had the meaning of civilised, worthy, and therefore noble.

² Traditionally the Path is divided into three sections: virtue (sammāvācā, sammākammanto, sammā-ājīvo), mind-mastery (sammāvāyāmo, sammāsati, sammāsamādhi) and wisdom (sammādiṭṭhi, sammāsaṅkappo), but it should be borne in mind that all factors of the Path work to support each other, and this is not a hierarchical sequence.

³ The eightfold Path, when fulfilled, becomes the tenfold Path, with the addition of sammāñāṇaṁ and sammāvimutti, which are liberating knowledge and freedom.
Katamā ca, bhikkhave, sammādiṭṭhi?
Now what, monks, is right view?

Yam kho, bhikkhave, dukkhe ūkhaṁ
That, monks, which is knowledge about suffering

dukkhasamudaye ūkhaṁ
knowledge about the origination of suffering

dukkhanirrodhe ūkhaṁ
knowledge about the cessation of suffering

dukkhanirrodhaṁ paṭipadāya ūkhaṁ.
knowledge about the practice leading to the cessation of suffering.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammādiṭṭhi.¹
This, monks, is called right view.

Katamo ca, bhikkhave, sammāsaṅkappo?
Now what, monks, is right thought?

Nekkhammasaṅkappo, abyāpādasanāṅkappo, avihīṁsāsaṅkappo.²
The thought of renunciation, the thought of good-will, the thought of non-violence.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammāsaṅkappo.
This, monks, is called right thought.

¹ Mundane right-view is defined elsewhere (MN 41, 117, etc.) as: atthi dinnaṁ atthi viṭṭhaṁ atthi hutaṁ, atthi sukatadukkaṭānaṁ kammānaṁ phalaṁ vipāko, atthi ayaṁ loko atthi paro loko, atthi Mātā atthi Pitā, atthi sattā opapātikā, atthi loke samaṇabrāhmaṇā sammaggatā sammāpaṭipannā ye imaṁ-cā lokaṁ paraṁ-cā lokaṁ sāyaṁ abhiññā sacchikatvā pvedenti; there are gifts, offerings and sacrifices, there are fruit and result for well-done and badly-done deeds, there is this world and the next world, there are (obligations towards) Mother and Father, there are spontaneously born (heavenly) beings, there are in this world monks and priests who have practiced and attained correctly, and those who, themselves having directly realised it with their deep knowledge, make known this world and the next world; i.e. one must have understanding of wholesome and unwholesome actions, one’s duties to others, a belief in the heavenly realms and confidence in good teachers. If someone doesn’t have these, it is hard to see how he could make progress to supemmundane right-view.

² Avihīṁsā is simply another form of the better known ahiṁsā, a fundamental virtue associated with Mahātma Gandhi, which has been very influential in modern politics as a different way of getting things done: for those who are physically weak it adds the strength of morality.
Katamā ca, bhikkhave, sammavācā?
Now what, monks, is right speech?

Musāvādā veramaṇī
Refraining from false speech

pisuṇāya vācāya veramaṇī
refraining from malicious speech

pharusāya vācāya veramaṇī
refraining from rough speech

samphappalāpā veramaṇī.¹
refraining from frivolous talk.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammavācā.
This, monks, is called right speech.

Katamo ca, bhikkhave, sammākammanto?
Now what, monks, is right action?

Pāṇātipātā veramaṇī
Refraining from killing living creatures

adinnādānā veramaṇī
refraining from taking what has not been given

kāmesu² micchācārā veramaṇī.³
refraining from sexual misconduct.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammākammanto.
This, monks, is called right action.

¹ All four are normally included in the five virtuous practices (sīla) under right speech (musāvāda), but sometimes spelt out to make another set of eight virtuous practices, which has right livelihood as the eighth (ājīvā-āṭṭhamakasīla).

² Kāmesu micchācārā are two words, not a semantic compound, as it is apparently taken by all the editions, which print it as such. Kāma means sensuality, but in this context it is defined as being restricted to sexual matters.

³ These are the first three of the five precepts undertaken by lay followers. Together with the previous right speech and restraint from intoxicants they constitute the basic level of morality expected of anyone following the teaching.
Katamo ca, bhikkhave, sammā-ājīvo?
Now what, monks, is right livelihood?

Idha, bhikkhave, ariyasāvako micchā-ājīvaṁ pahāya, sammā-ājīvena ājīvaṁ kappeti.¹
Here, monks, a noble disciple, having abandoned a wrong way of livelihood, makes his living by a right way of livelihood.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammā-ājīvo.
This, monks, is called right livelihood.

¹ Five types of wrong livelihood for merchants are explained in Vaṇijjāsuttaṁ (AN 5.177): satthavaṇijjā, sattavaṇijjā, maṁsavāṇijjā, majjavāṇijjā, visavaṇijjā; dealing in weapons (lit. swords), living beings, meat, intoxicants and poisons; but generally speaking any activity whereby in the course of earning one’s living one has to break the precepts could be considered wrong livelihood. For monks and nuns, making a living through reading of signs, fortune telling, acting as a go-between, casting spells, accountancy, poetry, philosophy or acting as medical assistants would count as wrong livelihood (see DN 1, where they are spelt out in great detail).
Katamo ca, bhikkhave, sammāvāyāmo?
Now what, monks, is right endeavour?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu anuppannānaṁ pāpakānaṁ akusalānaṁ dhammānaṁ
Here, monks, a monk regarding bad and unwholesome thoughts that have not yet arisen anuppādāya chandaṁ janeti,1 generates desire for their non-arising,

vāyamati, viriyaṁ ārabhati, cittaṁ paggaphāti, padahati.
(in this regard) he endeavours, instigates energy, exerts his mind, and makes an effort.

Uppannānaṁ pāpakānaṁ akusalānaṁ dhammānaṁ
Regarding bad and unwholesome thoughts that have already arisen

pahānāya chandaṁ janeti,
he generates desire for their abandonment,

vāyamati, viriyaṁ ārabhati, cittaṁ paggaphāti, padahati.
(in this regard) he endeavours, instigates energy, exerts his mind, and makes an effort.

Anuppannānaṁ kusalānaṁ dhammānaṁ uppādāya chandaṁ janeti,
He generates desire for the arising of wholesome thoughts that have not yet arisen,

vāyamati, viriyaṁ ārabhati, cittaṁ paggaphāti, padahati.
(in this regard) he endeavours, instigates energy, exerts his mind, and makes an effort.

Uppannānaṁ kusalānaṁ dhammānaṁ ṭhitiyā, asammosāya,2
Regarding wholesome thoughts that have arisen he generates desire for their endurance, persistence, bhiyobhāvāya, veḍullāya, bhāvanāya, pāripūriyā chandaṁ janeti,

multiplication, extension, development, and fulfilment,

vāyamati, viriyaṁ ārabhati, cittaṁ paggaphāti, padahati.
(in this regard) he endeavours, instigates energy, exerts his mind, and makes an effort.

1 This section on the endeavours is a good example of the Pāḷi usage of negatives, which sounds so awkward in English, where we would normally say something simple here, like: he endeavours to prevent bad and unwholesome things from arising. In Pāḷi, though, there is a tendency to work with negative and positive forms of the same word (e.g. anuppannānaṁ ... uppannānaṁ, in next section), through the exchange of prefixes, and with cognate forms (e.g. anuppannānaṁ ... anuppādāya).

2 Normally asammosa would mean lack of confusion, absense of delusion, etc. Here the commentary defines it thus: asammosāyā ti avināsanatthaṁ: for persistence means for non-destruction - a meaning that is demanded by the context.
This, monks, is called right endeavour.
Katamā ca, bhikkhave, sammāsati?
Now what, monks, is right mindfulness?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu kāye kāyānupassī viharati,
Here, monks, a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) the body in the body,
ātāpī, sampajāno, satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassam.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Vedanāsu vedanānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) feelings in feelings,
ātāpī, sampajāno, satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassam.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Citte cittānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) the mind in the mind,
ātāpī, sampajāno, satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassam.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Dhammesu dhammānupassī viharati,
He dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things,
ātāpī, sampajāno, satimā, vineyya loke abhijjhādomanassam.
ardent, fully aware, and mindful, after removing avarice and sorrow regarding the world.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammāsati.
This, monks, is called right mindfulness.
Katamo ca, bhikkhave, sammāsamādhi?
Now what, monks, is right concentration?

Idha, bhikkhave, bhikkhu vivicceva kāmehi, vivicca akusalehi dhammehi, Here, monks, a monk, quite secluded from sense desires, secluded
from unwholesome things,

savitakkaṁ, savicāraṁ, vivekajaṁ pītisukhaṁ,
having thinking, reflection, and the happiness and joy
born of seclusion,

paṭhamaṁ jhānaṁ upasampajja viharati.¹
dwells having attained the first absorption.

Vitakkavicārānaṁ² vūpasamā
With the calming down of thinking and reflection,

ajjhattaṁ sampasādanaṁ, cetaso ekodibhāvaṁ,
with internal clarity, and one-pointedness of mind,

avitakkaṁ, avicāraṁ, samādhijaṁ pītisukhaṁ,³ being without thinking, without reflection, having the happiness and joy born of concentration,

dutiyaṁ jhānaṁ upasampajja viharati.
he dwells having attained the second absorption.

¹ Sammāsamādhi is always defined in terms of the absorptions (jhāna) in the discourses; there is no mention of such things as access concentration (upacārasamādhi) or momentary concentration (khaṇikasamādhi) until commentarial times. If they were sufficient to fulfil the Path we might have expected the Buddha to mention them.

² Vitakka and vicāra are sometimes transalted as applied and sustained thought. But if this is correct then they have a meaning in this context that they have nowhere else, as elsewhere they always have the much broader meanings of thinking and reflection, as translated here.

³ These are the sorts of pleasurable states of mind that counteract the attachment to sense-desires, and are always recommended in the discourses, as they lead on along the Path to liberation; it is an example of what was mentioned in the Vedanānupassanā as: nirāmīsaṁ sukhaṁ vedanāṁ; spiritual pleasant feeling.
Pītiyā ca virāgā upekkhako ca viharati,
With the fading away of joy he dwells equanimous,
sato ca sampajāno, sukhaṁ-ca kāyena¹ paṭisaṁvedeti,
mindful, fully aware, experiencing happiness through the body,
yan-taṁ Ariyā ācikkhanti: “Upekkhako satimā sukhavihāri” ti, about which the Noble Ones declare: “He dwells pleasantly, mindful, and equanimous,” tatiyaṁ jhānāṁ upasampajja viharati.
he dwells having attained the third absorption.

Sukhassa ca pahānā, dukkhassa ca pahānā,
Having abandoned pleasure, abandoned pain,
pubbeva somanassadomanassānaṁ atthaṅgamā,
and with the previous passing away of mental happiness and sorrow,
adukkham-asukham, upekkhāsatipārisuddhiṁ,² without pain, without pleasure, and with complete purity of mindfulness owing to equanimity, catutthaṁ jhānāṁ upasampajja viharati.
he dwells having attained the fourth absorption.

Ayaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, sammāsamādhi.
This, monks, is called right concentration.

Idaṁ vuccati, bhikkhave, Dukkhanirodhagāminī paṭipadā Ariyasaccaṁ.
This, monks, is called the Noble Truth of the Practice Leading to the Cessation of Suffering.

¹ Always defined in the commentaries (e.g. MNiddA, Guhaṭṭhakasuttaniddesavaṇṇanā; VinA, Verañjakaṇḍavaṇṇanā, etc.) as being the nāmakāya, or mind-body.
² I take upekkhā in the compound as an ablative and parse it: upekkhāya satimā pārisuddhiṁ; another way would be to take upekkhāsati as a dvanda, in which case it would translate as: complete purity of mindfulness and equanimity.
Thus he dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things in regard to himself, or he dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things in regard to others, or he dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things in regard to himself and in regard to others,

or he dwells contemplating the nature of origination in things,

or he dwells contemplating the nature of dissolution in things,

or he dwells contemplating the nature of origination and dissolution in things,

or else mindfulness that “there are these (various) things” is established in him

just as far as (is necessary for) a full measure of knowledge and a full measure of mindfulness,

and he dwells independent, and without being attached to anything in the world.

In this way, monks, a monk dwells contemplating (the nature of) things in (various) things,

in the Four Noble Truths.

The Advantages of Developing the Ways of Attending to Mindfulness

Yo hi koci, bhikkhave, ime cattāro satipaṭṭhāne evaṁ bhāveyya sattavassāni,
Whoever, monks, should develop these four ways of attending to mindfulness in this way for seven years,

tassa dvinnāṁ phalānaṁ aṇṇataram phalāṁ pāṭikaṅkhami:¹
for him, out of two results, a particular result is to be expected:

dīṭṭhe va dhamme² aṇṇā; sati vā upādisese³ anāgāmitā.
final knowledge in this very life; or, there being some attachment remaining, the state of non-returner.

Tīṭṭhantu, bhikkhave, sattavassāni,
Let alone seven years, monks,

yo hi koci, bhikkhave, ime cattāro satipaṭṭhāne evaṁ bhāveyya chavassāni
whoever should develop these four ways of attending to mindfulness in this way for six years

tassa dvinnāṁ phalānaṁ aṇṇataram phalāṁ pāṭikaṅkhami:
for him, out of two results, a particular result is to be expected

dīṭṭhe va dhamme aṇṇā; sati vā upādisese anāgāmitā.
final knowledge in this very life; or, there being some attachment remaining, the state of non-returner.

² All editions print diṭṭheva dhamme; but this obscures the fact that this is a locative absolute construction, lit: in the very things that are seen (or visible here and now, i.e. in this very life).
³ Sati ... upādisese is a locative absolutive construction, giving durative sense. Sati here is either formed from santam (the present participle of attihi) with denasalisation; or has been formed on its own stem sat; it appears this form only occurs in locative absolutive constructions.

that is to say, the four ways of attending to mindfulness.

Iti yan-taṁ vuttaṁ, idam-etaṁ paṭicca vuttaⁿ”-ti.
Thus, whatever was said, it is for this reason it was said.”
Idam-avoca Bhagavā,
The Gracious One said this,

attamanā te bhikkhū Bhagavato bhāsitaṁ abhinandun-ti.
and those monks were uplifted and greatly rejoiced in what was said by the Gracious One.
